The baths of St Thomas

Imagine a sunny little spot in the mountains at the bottom of a valley, with a large stone amphitheatre including three pools of sulphur hot water in the open. You are in St Thomas les Bains, part of the little "commune" of Fontpédrouse in a "département" called Eastern Pyrenees. This place is at an altitude of 1150 m; there is a fantastic hot spring at a temperature of 58° C and its benefits have been known for a very long time.

Three outside pools at a temperature of about 37°C have been built there; they are equipped with Jacuzzis, massaging jets and two series of natural sulphur showers with a regulated temperature.

The inner area will offer you three oriental rooms with progressive temperatures diffusing steam with essential oils of eucalyptus and equipped with concealed lighting in chromotherapy (fibre optics), a showers cold basin and you will also discover two Jacuzzis, a relaxation area, three rooms for beauty care and massages, as well as a tea room.

Everything in this heavenly spot was meant to bring you comfort and relaxation among a preserved natural environment.
